Seeding Down

The Lawn

A well kept lawn adds much to the beauty of the home, whether in the farm, or in town or village. The native prairie grass which is used so extensively is hard to clip and frequently contains grasses of many kinds as well as numerous weeds. In breaking up the prairie grass in preparation for cultivated grass the soil should be broken early in the season and backed later on. The ploughing should be deep and the land well worked down and all grass and weeds destroyed. If potatoes can be grown the second year and well looked after the ground will then be in first class condition for lawn grass.

Many mixtures of grasses are sold but practically all are made up largely of Kentucky Blue Grass. On the Scott Station excellent results have been had from Kentucky Blue Grass sown alone. This makes a grass of fine texture fairly easily clipped and one that is not easily destroyed.

The surface preparation of the seed bed will consist in leveling up the lawn with the harrow or rake and making the soil quite firm to near the surface. This should be done early in the season or after a rain.

The quantity of seed required will amount to approximately 100 lbs per acre or for a 35 by 140 ft lot about eight pounds. This last quantity will cost less than $3.00.

In sowing the seed can be spread by hand if no grass sower is available and then harrowed or raked in. It is advisable to sow one-half of the seed first, the other half later, sowing across ways with the first seed.

The main points to be observed, are, to have the seed bed in good tilth and see that the ground is levelled or properly; to sow early in the season and to have the seed evenly spread on the lawns.

Pasture For Hogs

Reduces Cost of Pork

High prices for farm produce do not always mean large profits. Cost of production is a very important part in determining the net profit a farmer makes on what he has to sell. This is a matter that should receive more attention than is being given to it. Manufacturers of articles that the farmer has to buy study the question of cost production very carefully. The farmer is a manufacturer of the things the other fellow has to buy, and while he does little in the way of setting the prices for his products, he should and should do more towards lessening production cost.

Take as an example, the production of pork. Economical production of pork depends largely upon the consumption of cheaply grown feed. In the summer time the hogs should be put on pasture. The pasture should be so managed that the forage produced will be clean, tender, and palatable. The idea that anything, no matter how dirty, is good enough for hog feed is erroneous. While the hog will eat some dirty food, he will eat more and thrive better if he is given clean food and clean water. Such crops as alfalfa, clover, rape or peas and oats make good hog pasture. The pasture should not be overgrazed. It is best to divide the pasture into two or three equal areas and allow the hogs to remain in each a week or ten days. This will allow the first pastured areas to recuperate before the hogs are turned into it again.

Some grain also should be fed when hogs are on pasture. Opinions differ regarding the quantity that should be fed. A medium ration would be from two per cent of the live weight of the hog. No fixed rule can be laid regarding this. The pasture should be tender and clean, and enough grain should be fed to keep the hogs shapely and in thrifty, growing condition at all times.

Crops sown on spring breaking the year the work is done, seldom produce satisfactory yields. The reason lies in the lack of soil moisture. The native grasses pump out the water as fast as the soil absorbs it. This explains why it is advisable in dry climates to cultivate prairie land for nearly a year before sowing a crop on it.

No more trouble in Dyeing. Sun Set Soap Dyes are simple. No staining of hands or utensils. Washing and drying all done in one effort.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
—Sunday, June 1st 1919: Faith: What it is and What it Does Hebrews 11: 1-10: 1, 2.

The people to whom this epistle was written, had lost the temple, the sacrifices, the symbols of Old Testament religion. As Christians, they had to believe in a great invisible high priest and Saviour. The writer shows that faith in the invisible behind the visible was always needed to make men victorious.

GOLDEN TEXT—Believe in God, believe also in me.—John 14: 1.

The Music Of The Willing Heart

A poor old fiddler was trudging late one night through Epping Forest, when a little man in a red cap met him.

"I want you to come and play at a wedding dance," said he. "But, sorry, sir," said the fiddler: "but I and my fiddle are too old for that sort of thing. What with my ment, I can only make such a screeching noise that people are glad to give me a penny to stop playing and go away."

"Never mind," said the little man. "If you can only play with a willing heart, you'll play well enough." He took the old fiddler to a lighted cave in the depth of the wood, and then led him down an underground passage, which opened out into a splendid hall. Hundreds of pretty fairies came dancing with delight round the poor old fiddler, crying: "Do play us a waltz! We have never heard a waltz! Do play for us!"

Remembering that it was only a willing heart that they wanted, the old beggar put his old fiddle under his chin and began to play. To his surprise, his arm and fingers became as strong and supple as a young man's, and his broken fiddle gave out a tone of wonderful beauty. Rocking himself to and fro with joy at the fine music he was making, he played for hours and hours without feeling the least fatigue; and when he had played every tune he could remember, one of the fairies said:

"Willing heart shall have a willing hand. Henceforward you shall always play as well as you have played to-night!"

When the old fiddler woke up next morning, he found he had become an excellent violinist, and that he had grown forty years younger; while his cheap fiddle had turned into a magnificent violin with a splendid tone. One step won't take you very far, You've got to keep on walking.

OF COURSE NOT

"If I stay in this street," asked a lady a policeman, "will it take me to the railway station?"

When is it easy to see what a man is thinking about? When he has a pain (gane) in his head.

What is the difference between a brewer and a kangaroo? One buys hops, and the other takes them.

Why is a crocodile a most deceitful animal? Because it greets you with an open face and takes you in.

What three letters is it that a good teacher cannot do without? A W Z (a wise head), of course.

The Peacock and The Crane

One day a peacock and a crane chanced to meet. The peacock strutted past, spreading its fine tail and looking with contempt upon the other.

"Well," said the crane "fine feathers make fine birds; indeed, but I think that it is much grander to be able to do something and soar above the clouds, than to strut about on the ground to be looked at by every passer-by."

Those who are finely dressed should not scoff at their poorer companions.

The Oak and the Reed

A great oak-tree which grew beside a river was blown down one stormy night. As it lay on the ground in the morning it noticed a reed which grew close to the edge of the water, and had not been injured. The oak was surprised, and asked how it could remain safe and uninjured in a storm which had been strong enough to tear up an oak by the roots.

The reed replied: "I am safe because, instead of being stubborn and stiff, and trusting in my own strength, I yield and bend to the blast, which then goes over my head and does not harm me at all."

"It is not wise to be stubborn; it is often safer to bend and give way."

Four Things

Four things a man must learn to do if he would make his record true: To think without confusion clearly, To love his fellow-men sincerely, To act from honest motives purely, To trust in God and heaven securely.

Looking Backward At Prices Obtained Ten Years Ago.

The strike at Winnipeg, bringing in its train a sympathetic strike of no less than 6,000 workers in the City of Winnipeg, and sympathetic strikes in the leading western cities has much of its cause in the high cost of living. Under this we publish an extract from the Calgary Herald which quotes the prices of certain farm produce ten years ago, and the to-day's prices.

Comment is unnecessary, the conditions of the wage-earners are far inferior to those of the farmer. Thus we see the general consent to strike.

U. F. A. Sunday Will Be June 15th

Farmers' Sunday in Alberta will be June 15th this year. That day has been set apart under the auspices of the U.F.A. as a day for a general consideration of the relations between the organized farm movement and the churches. Ministers of the several denominations will be invited to preach sermons at a number of U.F.A. mass meetings, and in the town pulpits will also speak of the aims and objects of the movement, showing how the church and the farm can help each other. A day of this kind has been named each year, and has proved a popular feature of the church calendar.

President H. W. Wood, of the U.F.A., refers to the matter in his annual circular as follows:

The church in the past has placed its emphasis on making individuals better. The U.F.A. is placing its emphasis between the two; or is there an impassable barrier between them? Does the church need a regenerated social system in which its individuals the higher laws of life? Does the U.F.A. need better individuals to build into its social system?

"It is evident that we cannot separate the individual from society, or society from the individual."

"The U.F.A. should make a close investigation of foundation principles and should be told by the church, whether or not Christian teachings offer any information that will be of assistance in social regeneration. The fight is on between democracy and autocracy, between God and mammon, and this fight is to the finish."

"The U.F.A. and the church must both know exactly where they stand in this conflict. Surely there will be many things to consider this U.F.A. Sunday, and world conditions call for the deepest thought there is in us."

Hastening TheCorn Crop

F. T. Shutt, Dominion Chemist, points out, in an article in the Agricultural Gazette for May, that one of the more important functions of a phosphoric acid fertilizer is to hasten maturity and expresses the view that an application of it will materially hasten the ripening of the corn crop more especially in an adverse season. By risk from early autumn frost and the time for cutting has arrived. The use of superphosphate per acre broadcast or drilled in on prepared land before planting, in order that the effect might be noted, Dr. Shutt suggests gets an application of, say, 250 lbs. this means the corn may reach the stage that a strip alongside should be left untreated.

The corn growers in the colder and more northern parts of Canada might find some advantages from the use of

For head lice on chickens the use of blue ointment or mercurial ointment has been found effective. One part of the ointment is mixed with 2 parts of vasoline and a lump of the mixture about the size of a pea is rubbed thoroughly at the base of the feathers about the head.

Artland Notes

By Robert Jukes

A train composed of some half a dozen cars passed through last week, filled with troops from the east to western points.

Mr. Harrison, an inspector for the Canada Life Association Coy. arrived from Saskatoon recently, on a short trip in the surrounding district.

We are glad to note that our old friend, Henry Johannes has made a start in his new business. This however seems already assumed, for having purchased a bunch of 20 Shropshire ewes, and a ram, on the 19th instant, he has already got 22 healthy lambs. This is going some!

We hear that a very pleasant evening was spent at Brady school, last Friday, the occasion being the 'Social' that was organized by the ladies of Sherlock Lake. Everybody enjoyed themselves notwithstanding that it was rather crowded for dancing.

With reference to the note that appeared in our last issue entitled "Brady's Social, May 23rd," we have, up to the moment of going to press, received no notice from the Chairman or Secretary, as to the programme to be arranged in connection with the Returned Soldiers.

The meeting of the committee will no doubt be held shortly at some date to be arranged—we will publish the same in due course on receipt of advice from the Committee of Management.

Some railway surveyors passed here recently—we are informed that they are operating somewhere in the neighbourhood of W. Gibbard.

The "Smelling" contest which had been looked forward to with curiosity by a good many people turned out a grand success, over $100 being realized from the sale of pies.

The Returned Soldiers Fund is enriched by the donation of the $100 raised at this social.

Altogether our Sherlock friends are to be congratulated on a most successful evening

Brady Grain GrowersTo Meet, May 31st

A meeting of the Manitou Lake Grain Growers Association will be held at Brady School Saturday, the 31st of May, at 8 p.m. sharp. Business of importance is to be transacted, and it is hoped that all members will be present.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sir,

As a contributor to the above fund, for the survivors of the men Brady Roll of Honor; I would like to make an observation.

Since the institution of this fund, it appears to me that the general body of subscribers have never had the opportunity of expressing their views in public meeting, as to what form the proposed testimonial should take.

If such a meeting was held, contributors and the general public could state their views and opinions thus affording an opportunity to the committee of management, to gain a knowledge of the general sentiment, and upon that basis build their own line of action.

In lieu of this, I venture to suggest the building of a modest Memorial Hall for public purposes of all kinds, to the special memory of those who have been taken from us. The survivors would also indirectly sharing in this mark of appreciation, should be the recipients of some further token, whether in the form of a watch or otherwise.

This proposition would naturally involve a higher expenditure than originally contemplated.

I think, however that this consideration would not weigh generally, seeing that such an effort on our part would constitute a real and permanent memorial to our gallant dead, while at the same time in no way ignoring the members of the Brady contingent who happily are still with us.

In addressing you these few lines, I trust that there may yet be time to develop the idea I have endeavoured to outline, before any further steps are taken in this matter of the watches

I am yours faithfully,
J. A. PROCTOR

OUR SERIAL STORY

CHAPTER XIV
A tell-tale Locomotive

It was the first Sunday in September and Daisy Enderby was finding it very quiet at the Dingle—far too quiet for her mercurial temperament. Not only was it Sunday, but it was Church Sunday with not a sign of a young man round the place, and Daisy felt that she had a genuine grievance against the world in general and young men in particular.

It was dull and chilly outside and yet not cold enough to have a fire in the stove. Mrs. Enderby was resting upstairs; Mr. Enderby, Bert, and Marion had walked over to the anniversary service in the Presbyterian Church, a mile away, "condoning," so Daisy declared at dinner-time, when the walk was planned, "heresy and schism for the sake of being neighbourly and to humour Dugald McLeod," she added with maliciously and pointedly to Marion.

Only Daisy and Evelyn Raye were left at home, and for the past hour Evelyn had been writing at a little table by the window.

Only Daisy and Evelyn Raye were left at home, and for the past hour Evelyn had been writing at a little table by the window. Daisy stood a walk up to the stables and scolded the chore boy whom she found smoking a surreptitious cigarette in the granary; from there she wandered to the end of the lane on the town line—not a sign in sight—and back to the house, where Evelyn was still writing. Evelyn looked up with a smile and a little nod as she went on with her letter—it was the last straw.

"Evelyn, if you don't shut that writing away I shall do something desperate. For three mortal Sundays there has not been a soul near the place more interesting than Jim Hardie's chore boy, and he only came up for some horse medicine, and now every body else has gone off to the Conviction up the road and you have not said a dozen words to me since you came back this morning from your visit to Minnedosa, and you ought to have lots of news to tell me."

"I'm very sorry, dear, if I've been unbecomingly, but I wanted to get my "home" letters finished to-day—your father is going to town in the morning—but I've almost finished, and then I'd tell you the news. I'm afraid there is nothing very exciting after all; but you see, Daisy, here is the last Minnedosa paper; Mr. Jordan has finished this morning for your father and I forgot to give it to him. I'll have finished my letter by the time you have read it, and then I'll talk, or walk, or do anything you wish."

"Well, your letter must be nearly finished then, for the paper usually lasts me five minutes for the news and ten if I read the advertisements—thank you, dear, I'll read the "locals" first," and Daisy settled herself down on the old lounge and proceeded to read the "locals" with more or less audible comments to herself.

"Mrs. William Brown returned on Tuesday." (How thrilling!) "Our worthy young fellow-townsmen, Mr. Fred Twopenny, returned from his wedding trip to the East last Saturday—congratulations, Fred." (How horribly familiar!)

"A deputation of our leading citizens, headed by Mr. Pat Cassidy, waited on the local government this week with regard to a rearrangement of the town debenture indebtedness. They report a very sympathetic reception and returned with the assurance of material assistance if the Government is sustained at the ensuing election." (I call that rather barefaced even for Manitoba.)

"Mr. Tom Dennis—" "There, Daisy, I'm ready now," broke in Evelyn, looking her kind, with a sharp click and rising from her chair as she spoke.

"Just a moment, Evelyn. I must see what the 'Star' has to say about Tom—"

"Mr. Tom Dennis of Connemara Farm brought in some very fine wheat in the straw on Saturday morning; he says he has forty acres of it ready for the binder. He came in for an additional supply of twine. (Did he really now?) He expects it to run close to thirty bushels to the acre. I keep an eye on Connemara Farm, girls, if that's the kind of farmers you are." (Well, I call that the limit; Tom and Jack will be furious when we see it.) "The way, Evelyn, did you see this, wonderful wheat—and Tom—on Saturday?"

"Not on Saturday, but he was in at the Rectory after church on Sunday."

"After church on Sunday—oh, Evelyn Raye!"

"Tom very like Tom not to want to drop home in the dark. I hope he left in good time on Sunday, the dew falls so early and the damp is so bad for children."

"Well, dear, don't be ridiculous," said Evelyn, blushing in spite of herself, he left just after tea; we went for a walk with the Rectory Choir after dinner—and, oh, by the way, Tad Jordan is to come up to the Dingle this first night any one is down, perhaps your father will bring him to-morrow."

"Of course he will. We all like Tad up here; he has a great time among the men and the horses, and he's a great boy to talk—to in a noisy, boyish way at all—but he has the oddest things in a quiet, simple voice, and has a way of observing and drawing conclusions of his own about people and things that is quite capable of proving embarrassing."

"I saw a great deal of him during my visit to the Rectory; we used to go long walks down by the river and through Cowan's Bush, and I got into the way of talking to him as if he were grown up."

"Everybody does, I think, and he's as his father to tell anything to in confidence; it's the little things he notices and says nothing about at the time that he is apt to reproduce to one's undoing, but it's entirely without guile and in simple, good faith," "He always spoke enthusiastically of the good time he had when he came up to the Dingle, and this time he is to be allowed to go for a day's visit to the Dennis—" "Mr. Tom Dennis promised to take him out for a day—the day I came up to the Dingle."

"Well, Tad won't forget it. Tad is not too busy to come over for him—he might be, you know; perhaps he will come over on a Sunday—not in the track, you know."

"There are the others back from church," said Evelyn, who had gone to the window, ignoring Daisy's last remark. "I'll ask Mr. Enderby now if he can call for Tad. Why, I wonder—here Marion is—just Mr. Bert and his father."

"O'ho! must be here," said Daisy, joining Evelyn at the window. "Why there she is coming through the lane with Dugald McLeod—and see, Evelyn, she's carrying her bible—watch him holding the garden gate open for her; if those flowers in his coat are not the very identical sweet peas I pinned on Merry's blouse. I'm a Dutchman, or at least a Dutchwoman; he'd done it—sabbath too. See how innocent merry will be when she comes in; but rum's the word—here comes Dad and Bert, both looking as unconcerned as the sky falling as the Babes in the Wood."

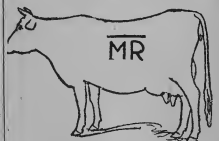

"Well, girls here we are," said Mr. Enderby as he and Bert entered the room; "did you think we were never coming? It was all very nice and friendly down there; the minister told us that when Winnie was a very good speaker—he gave us more of a lecture than a sermon. I suppose Mr. Jordan with his twenty minutes has spent us for—"

"For an hour and twenty minutes—oh, Dad?" interrupted Daisy. "Well, if Ephraim will go after strange idols, it's his own fault if he's bored. I suppose there was a great crowd?" "Yes the place was packed; there are a lot of themselves, and then the Methodists closed their church for the day, and there was a sprinkling of our church as well as ourselves."

"I guess it was a pretty thin sprinkling," said Daisy. "I'll say this for our (Continued on next page) boy generally, that is they don't go to old Daisy, they never go anywhere else."

"I asked Evelyn, 'I hoped he would come to-day I have some letters for him to read.'"

"Oh yes, your brother was there with Jim Hardie; he is coming back after supper, Jack Dennis went with him to roosebank."

"You never mean to tell us that Jack was at the 'Outmeal' service?" said Daisy with affected horror.

"No, Jack was not at the service—I wish to goodness he had been," replied Mr. Enderby, looking vexed. "We met him on the town line as we were coming back—near old Dawson's; he had been up to try and get his mail, and old Dawson wouldn't give it to him—said the office was closed."

"The old curmudgeon," said Daisy indignantly. "Why, I know we've got mail on a Sunday before now when we've not been able to send up on a week day."

"I know we have, but he doesn't have to give it out on a Sunday; it would have been all right if Mary Ann had been there, but she and the old lady were away to church, and I expect the old man wanted to pay the Dennis boys back for chaffing him. To make it worse, he told Jack there was a big packet of English papers for them—and you know how keen Jack is for war news—and finished up by telling him that there was no mail "for the likes of him" except in office hours."

"What did Jack do then?" asked Daisy eagerly.

"Why, he could do nothing, but judging by the rage he was in when we met him I imagine he said a good deal."

"And Jack can talk plainly," remarked Daisy appreciatively, "when his 'Irish' is up—serve the horrid old man high stool."

"Well, I'm sorry it happened," said Mr. Enderby. "I hate any fuss and ill will in the settlement, however, it cannot be helped. By the way, Jack said something about Tom coming over for Tad Jordan—when is the boy coming up?"

"He was to come up the first time any one was down and had room for him; Evelyn thought perhaps you could bring him up to-morrow."

"I suppose I can; he will have to ride on a load of twine, but I don't care, he will mind."

"He will be perfectly happy so long as he gets here. I think," said Evelyn, he's longing to come up."

"And," added Daisy, "he's to go over to the Dennis for a day's shooting. Now, Dad, if you and Bert will 'vamoose' we girls will get supper ready. Oh, Merry, here you are at last—and Mr. McLeod too! Now if you two can entertain each other for just a 'teetle' bit longer, Evelyn and I will have the table set in 15 minutes. I do hope, Merry, the walk was not too much for you?"

Later on in the evening Daisy discovered to her great disgust that she had not yet made sufficient allowance for the difference of Dugald McLeod in his mood, and she had no reserve in expressing her disappointment to her sister.

"Well, Merry, if you can put up with the slowness of the pace I suppose the rest of us will have to—but it is an Englishman on Irishman for mine, when the time comes. After all I expect it is half your own fault; you know Dr. Casey says—there's many a good fish lost through not knowing when to strike—but you never a sport so what's the use of talking?"

OPPORTUNITY for Retail Merchants

THE next few years will mark a tremendous change in the business of retailing.

Motor Transportation, now reduced to a low-cost basis, gives retailers a great opportunity for business growth because it widens their trading area.

The Ford One-Ton Truck makes available this opportunity. It is Motor Transportation at low cost—low first cost, low maintenance cost, low operating cost.

A small outlay will motorize your deliveries and open to you the opportunity for business expansion.

Complete Trucks—Two Standard Bodies

Ordinary hauling and delivery work can be best adapted to two standard types—the Stake Body and the Express Body.

These two body types are kept in stock ready for immediate delivery. They insure the maximum efficiency from the Ford Truck.

Both types have the Enclosed Cab with the two-way windshield which gives the driver proper protection from the weather.

One Woman On

The Job

Now Teddy dear and do you hear
 The news that's going round;
 I am elected school trustee
 Now I'll clear up the ground.

The day I was elected
 I took after Mr. Bing:
 'Twas for that old long standing grade.
 But I did comb him then.

You remember how he looked Ted,
 But there so tall and straight,
 Was so much of a gentleman,
 He would not retaliate.

Next came Mr. Stout the Scotchman
 The great big burly bear;
 Who said when woman held the Fort
 That he would not be there.

We tackled him together, Ted,
 You had an axe to grind,
 Our progress it was very slow,
 Till this came to my mind.

This Scotchman has a little son,
 A boy of nine at school,
 He is a studious little chap,
 And seldom breaks a rule.

But when a personal friend of mine
 Did stand up straight and square
 And tell to all the people
 That this little lad did swear.

'Twas then the rate-payers took it up
 And firmly took a stand,
 When they demanded fair play,
 I had to take a stand.

We thought then my dear Teddy,
 That we were down and out;
 All on account of Mr. Bing
 And the Scotchman Sir Stout.

But our courage it revived, Ted,
 We tackled to it with a will,
 'T was you suggested that we take Stouts Councilship away.

You did the best; you told, Ted
 And fairy tales you told,
 From out the council chamber,
 That would shame the Bards of old.

But Stout was re-elected
 By acclamation strong,
 Which shows he was in the right, Ted
 And we were in the wrong.

Now back to home and babe I'll go
 And do the best I can,
 If woman is so superior,
 Why marry a—mere man.

RHUBARB CULTURE

Rhubarb prefers a moist and shady position and will do well on the west or north side of a bluff or building.
Dig a trench two feet wide and eighteen inches deep. Mix the soil with an equal quantity of well rotted stable manure and return to the trench.
Rows should be four foot apart and the plants set in the rows three foot apart. The crowns two inches below the surface. Pack the soil well about the roots and give a good soaking with water or liquid manure.
If the ground is well drained, water

CONSERVE YOUR CAPITAL

Around nearly every one of the twelve hundred farms within the radius of twenty miles of Chauvin, there are countless things of service and value, but are of no present use nor income to their owners. Taking fifty dollars as the average value of such idle material, fast becoming junk, we come to the conclusion that there are

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS LAYING IDLE WITHIN TWENTY MILES OF CHAUVIN

Now is a time when every resource needs to be conserved. Now is not a good time for auction sales, especially of goods in small quantities. Now is the time when folks are seeking to save money when making purchases.

ADVERTISE IN YOUR LOCAL PAPER

There is no cheaper medium for making a sale. There is no quicker manner of filling your pocket with the proceeds of such idle material. There is no more effective manner of conserving the wealth of this district
